Sunday, July 22, 2016 Black Kites of Costa Rica The Costa Rican kite has been found in the national park of Corcovado since 1982. This is one of the largest bird colonies in the world. In the area around the park there are more than 15,000 kites, but few nests, which are formed around the trees of the forest. The population of this bird is estimated at 1.3 million. Although this is the third largest national park in the country, it is far from being visited by tourists. The best time to see the kites in the area is during the first week of January. The nest of the black kite Costa Rica has a large area of forests and mountains, which in the whole country count for more than half of its area. The only large areas with heavy population are the northwestern region (the Talamanca area) and the southern coastal region (the Osa and Corcovado area). The latter is the main attraction for the many wildlife lovers who come to Costa Rica. Corcovado is the second largest national park in the country after Gandoca, but it is not often visited by tourists. It holds the largest kite flock in the world, with over 15,000 birds. They are also a rather difficult bird to see, because they are usually not seen except after sunset, or under the moonlight. You need to be very lucky to see a bird in this situation, but even when you see one, you will not see the nest, because it is hidden in the forest.--TSM1-- The MIT License (MIT) Copyright (c) 2014 Reddit Permission is hereby granted, free of charge, to any person obtaining a copy of this software and associated documentation files (the "Software"), to deal in the Software without restriction, including without limitation the rights to use, copy, modify, merge, publish, distribute, sublicense, and/or sell copies of the Software, and to permit persons to whom the Software is furnished to do so, subject to the following conditions: The above copyright notice and this permission notice shall be included in all copies or substantial portions of the Software. Enhancing enzymatic hydrolysis of lignocellulosic biomass by feeding steam: biogas potential analysis. The effects of steam feeding on a commercial cellulase enzymatic hydrolysis of a lignocellulosic feedstock, wheat straw, were investigated. Hydrolysis experiments were performed in a vessel with a working volume of 3.35 L at 50°C, with removal of the process vapors from the vessel by a flexible tubular condensing heat exchanger. The experiments were performed without and with steam feeding (condensed steam only or steam supplemented with 15.0 g/L Na<sub>2</sub>SO<sub>4</sub> (wt/wt)). At steam addition rates of 8.0 g/L (condensed steam-only) and 15.0 g/L (steam supplemented with Na<sub>2</sub>SO<sub>4</sub>), the efficiency of enzymatic hydrolysis improved significantly. The hydrolysis rate, expressed as xylose yield, increased from 68% to 94% after steam feeding. The application of steam in a vessel with a high solids content has the potential to reduce enzyme usage, as the product production may be achieved with fewer enzymes and operating costs. The biogas potential analysis indicates that the hydrolysate produced under steam feed conditions would have a biogas potential of 0.28-0.31 L biogas/m<sup>3</sup> of solids. This analysis also indicates that 30-40% of the biogas produced can be released into the atmosphere, while the remaining 60-70% can be recovered for utility. Cerebral blood flow and metabolism during sulpiride treatment in patients with severe schizophrenia: a PET study. Dopaminergic dysfunction in schizophrenia has been described as decreased D(2) receptor function, especially in the limbic regions. The therapeutic efficacy of antipsychotics can be influenced by the development of tolerance. The aim of this PET study was to investigate the effects of a therapeutic dose (100 mg) of sulpiride on regional cerebral blood flow (rCBF) and the regional cerebral metabolic rate of glucose (rCMRgl) in patients with severe schizophrenia, before and after treatment, in comparison to healthy subjects. The study was performed before and at least 3 weeks after the start of sulpiride. <sup>13</sup>N-ammonia and <sup>18</sup>F-fluorodeoxyglucose PET were used to measure rCBF and rCMRgl, respectively. A decrease in rCBF and an
